Jerome Roos
Beyond the Vote: Confronting Power as Flows

Representative democracy, which is bound by the territoriality of the nation state, is fundamentally incapable of addressing the reality of power as de-territorialized flows. Once you recognize that power today consists in flows, you can see that contesting that power requires breaking, restricting or redirecting those flows in ways that can produce outcomes different from those generated by the naked logic of accumulation inherent to the capitalist system.

Since flows are by their very definition decentralized and dispersed, you will either need a higher form of centralization that encapsulates the entire space of flows and can therefore restrict and redirect such flows (i.e., a federal political entity spanning the entire globe), or you need to create new political spaces that operate outside of the sphere of capital flows altogether (i.e., break out of the cycle of accumulation as much as possible by refusing to participate in it).

The only truly revolutionary strategies today are therefore either to aspire to world socialism enacted by a functional global government (good luck with that!), or to develop alternative means of production and new modalities of social life outside of the sphere of global capital. The latter would require the reclamation of land to create new public spaces within which to situate alternative political subjectivities and form new collectivities. Such a quest for autonomy would inevitably involve the contestation of the territorial integrity of the nation state, and hence the legitimacy of its “monopoly on violence”.

This is exactly what the experiments of the indignados, the aganaktismenoi, and the Occupy movement were all about. It is also what the great revolutionary episodes of the Paris Commune, anarchist Catalonia, the Soviet Republic of Bavaria, and the Zapatista uprising in Chiapas tried to realize. Direct democracy has been successfully practised in the past, and continues to be successfully practised in the present; but, as John Holloway — “philosopher of the Zapatistas” — puts it, it can only thrive “in a time liberated from the ticking of the clock and a space free from the measuring rod.”

Once upon a time there lived in a certain village a little country girl, the prettiest creature who was ever seen. Her mother was excessively fond of her; and her grandmother doted on her still more. This good woman had a Icarus made for her. It suited the girl so extremely well that everybody called her Icarus. One day her mother, having made some cakes, said to her, "Go, my dear, and see how your grandmother is doing, for I hear she has been very ill. Take her a cake, and this little pot of butter." Icarus set out immediately to go to her grandmother, who lived in another village. As she was going through the wood, she met with a Daedalus, who had a very great mind to eat her up, but he dared not, because of some woodcutters working nearby in the forest. He asked her where she was going. The poor child, who did not know that it was dangerous to stay and talk to a Daedalus, said to him, "I am going to see my grandmother and carry her a cake and a little pot of butter from my mother." "Does she live far off?" said the Daedalus "Oh I say," answered Icarus; "it is beyond that mill you see there, at the first house in the village." "Well," said the Daedalus, "and I'll go and see her too. I'll go this way and go you that, and we shall see who will be there first." The Daedalus ran as fast as he could, taking the shortest path, and the little girl took a roundabout way, entertaining herself by gathering nuts, running after butterflies, and gathering bouquets of little flowers. It was not long before the Daedalus arrived at the old woman's house. He knocked at the door: tap, tap. "Who's there?" "Your grandchild, Icarus," replied the Daedalus, counterfeiting her voice; "who has brought you a cake and a little pot of butter sent you by mother." The good grandmother, who was in bed, because she was somewhat ill, cried out, "Pull the bobbin, and the latch will go up." The Daedalus pulled the bobbin, and the door opened, and then he immediately fell upon the good woman and ate her up in a moment, for it been more than three days since he had eaten. He then shut the door and got into the grandmother's bed, expecting Icarus, who came some time afterwards and knocked at the door: tap, tap. "Who's there?" Icarus, hearing the big voice of the Daedalus, was at first afraid; but believing her grandmother had a cold and was hoarse, answered, "It is your grandchild Icarus, who has brought you a cake and a little pot of butter mother sends you." The Daedalus cried out to her, softening his voice as much as he could, "Pull the bobbin, and the latch will go up." Icarus pulled the bobbin, and the door opened. The Daedalus, seeing her come in, said to her, hiding himself under the bedclothes, "Put the cake and the little pot of butter upon the stool, and come get into bed with me." Icarus took off her clothes and got into bed. She was greatly amazed to see how her grandmother looked in her nightclothes, and said to her, "Grandmother, what big arms you have!" "All the better to hug you with, my dear." "Grandmother, what big legs you have!" "All the better to run with, my child." "Grandmother, what big ears you have!" "All the better to hear with, my child." "Grandmother, what big eyes you have!" "All the better to see with, my child." "Grandmother, what big teeth you have got!" "All the better to eat you up with." And, saying these words, this wicked Daedalus fell upon Icarus, and ate her all up.

I had thought the writer must first have it all in his head and only then put it into words, but no. I began to see how it was really excitingly done:
You wrote from what you didn't know the act. Poetry starts here. (Clark

QUESTION: Did you have any reason for writing it or did the words just come out?

C.C.: I had a reason for getting to the place where I started no write that kind of thing, which I was trying to explain in being influenced by Saroyan putting his one word. He put so much pressure on one word, is what it was. He insisted that that word was the poem. You could talk about art being insistent emphasis. The words really came to me very strongly, as strong things. And I began to think: but I want to put them together with that kind of intensity. I want to see what happens.

Also, another thing I was interested in, at the time, was making a poem of words than don't go together in some ways, that have a resistance, that they don't go. Than kind of energy. As that word "ohm" has to do, in a way, with electrical resistance.

There's a perfect coining of post-Fire Music developments in African-American jazz in the 1970s and 1980s – “from ragtime to no time” – and it is courtesy of the drummer Beaver Harris. This was the name of the first LP issued by the cooperative 360 Degree Music Experience, on their own 360 Records label, and perfectly encapsulates (albeit broadly defined) the aesthetic of tradition-into-freedom and vice versa espoused by the second and third wave of avant-garde jazz musicians. [...] As Timothy Marquand wrote in the liner notes to that LP, “From Rag Time to No Time is not a chronological survey of jazz styles. It is about a circle of communication, and underlying sense of community that improvising musicians feel when they gather to express themselves. With honest and creative playing, communal ties are strengthened and the circle expands to welcome those who share by listening.” (Clifford Allen)

At times, the music is sparse and almost unbearably tense, as if it could disintegrate at the slightest touch or dissolve into the thinnest air. At others, it is a scramble of impossibly high scratches and thudding percussive rumbles as dense and impenetrable as the softer moments are transparent. No reason but the non-reason of spontaneity dictates the inclusion of the gentle or the harsh; every sound hangs in the air as its own entity, unhindered by time and untouched by pressures of context and development.
